ANDERSON LOOKS TO MASTER THE MILWAUKEE MILE

"On the heels of a strong run at the most recent oval race, the Colorado driver looks to make the most of his first trip to Milwaukee"

Fort Collins, Colorado - Scott Anderson, the 2011 Skip Barber National Champion and former MAZDASPEED Motorsports Development scholarship recipient, is poised for a breakout performance in the second oval race of the 2013 Pro Mazda season. With a solid fifth in the Night Before the 500 held at Lucas Oil Raceway to kick off the month of May, Anderson and the Juncos Racing team have their sights set on a podium finish in this weekend's speedway racing action.

"The Night Before The 500 race was a bit of good and bad," smiles Anderson. "I got to experience the car when it was nearly perfect and how frustrating it was to lose that balance on race day. While fifth was a decent result and our speed wasn't that far off, it was hard to be off the pace at all after being nearly the fastest during practice. I think it was a good lesson on how on top of it you need to be and it's something we need to focus on in Milwaukee. We need to really take advantage of all the track time we have and try to keep the setup changes going in the right direction."

Over the past couple of months Anderson and the Juncos Team have been completely in oval mode with The Night Before The 500 at Lucas Oil Raceway and now to the Milwaukee Mile, part of this weekend's IndyCar race. This weekend Anderson will bring the #44 Juncos Racing/Laser Nail Centers/Neuropathy Testing Center/Foot Surgery Center of Northern Colorado Pro Mazda machine to the ultra fast, low banking speedway where he was fourth quickest at the recent official series test.

"It's a bit different being this focused on ovals," comments Anderson. "It takes a different approach. The things you need to focus on as a driver are very different and it brings out a whole new set of strengths and weaknesses you might have that don't apply as much to road and street circuits. It's all still very new to me but I'm getting used to it and I'm really starting to enjoy oval racing. It's much more frustrating when things aren't going well and it is a lot harder to drive around a handling issue on an oval than it would be on a road circuit, but it is also more rewarding when things are going well and you have the car really well dialed. Our test at Milwaukee two weeks ago went well, so I think we have a good starting point coming into the race weekend."

Anderson heads into the one off race sitting fourth in points with three top tens and two top fives in five starts. The 2013 Pro Mazda Championship Presented By Cooper Tires teams and drivers take to the Milwaukee Mile for official testing on Thursday June 13 followed by qualifying and racing on Friday June 14th.
